

The adventures of Amy & Zoé

A lovely day rises above the big city where Zoe and Amy, the cutest little dogs, live their puppy lives as best friends. A day that is bound to be filled with laughter and adventures; but also, a day that promises to be very noisy...

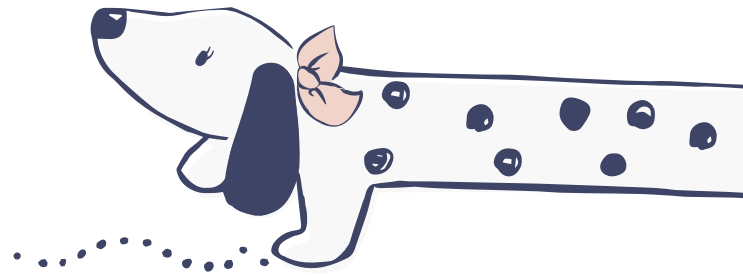

Indeed, the city where Amy and Zoe live is so big that nothing ever stops moving:

Ding-dong! On the sidewalks, the doors from busy stores keep opening and shutting.

Vroom-uroom! On the road, the cars keep coming and going.

Blink-blink! The taxi signs keep switching from green to red and from red to green.

Beep-Beep! People keep rushing.

- Sometimes, says Zoe, our big city moves so fast that it makes my head spin!
- And sometimes, replies Amy, I wish I was a turtle so I could do everything in slow motion.

Upon hearing that thought, Zoe bursts out laughing:

- Well, how about we go to the park to greet... the turtles?

Amy is thrilled! No sooner said than done, the happy friends leave the grey concrete behind and enter the park as if they had found heaven. As soon as they walk through the gate, a soft breeze brushes their ears. Both of them, very excited, raise their muzzle to smell the fresh air that is now tickling their puppy noses:

- How nice and refreshing ! This place is like a soap bubble! says Amy with a smile.
- Even better: it's like a green bubble, full of trees and blooming flowers, adds Zoe.

- Can we get in? they ask with a mischievous and joyful tone of voice.

As the horse agrees to give them a ride, our two little lady pups hop into the pretty carriage and off they go on a fantastic journey across the park and its curvy bridges. They are heading towards the turtle lake!

- It is so funny that all we can hear right now is the sound of the horse's hooves, notices Amy.

But Zoe is not paying attention. She gets distracted as, a few yards behind the carriage, she recognizes Aston, her brother, and his friend Jack. The two puppy boys are racing and galloping like two mad creatures.

They run so fast that they end up overtaking the carriage where Zoe and Amy are now calling them, entertained by their playful race.

Slightly further, the horse drops off the two lady pups at the square, opposite the lake, blue as the sky. Zoe and Amy are mesmerized by the calm and peaceful waters. The park is so big that each living element has room to breathe quietly.

Pchit-pchit! The water from the fountain sprays the strollers.
Buzz-Buzz! The insects fly from one flower to another.
Splish-Splash! The turtles slide on the lake pebbles.
And then...Pop-Pop! What is this?

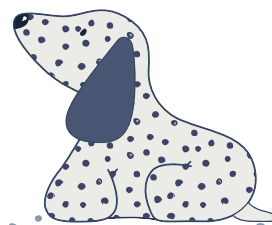

Zoe and Amy turn around to discover their companions, Aston, Jack and little Marley, jumping on giant bubbles and blowing them up. Amused, Zoe and Amy join them in turn for some joyous big bubble popping.

Very soon, our five little friends' tummies start rumbling :

- Fresh air makes me hungry!
says Marley with a big smile.

Luckily, the puppy had brought along a large wicker basket enclosing an amazing picnic.

- Waw! say the other puppies in unison!

Looking forward to share a meal together, Zoe, Amy and their friends find a green heavenly little corner to sit in the park.
There, they roll into the tender grass that hugs them as a soft bed.
Happily, they feast on the delicious dishes that Marley prepared for them while staring at the surrounding buildings in the distance.

This lovely day has now come to an end in Zoe and Amy's big city.
A day that was indeed full of laughter, adventures...and fresh air!

If you too enjoy walking through the nature with your parents, let us know if you ever get to meet there our puppy friends from the big city!
