

The adventures of Gaby & Sam

The golden sun is slowly setting behind the woods, carrying with it a silver haze, giving the trees the softest cotton look.

The moon, in turn, rises calm and serene above all nature and shines upon it the perfect amount of light. Neither too much, nor too little, as would a soft night light.

Soothed by this reassuring silver lighting, the animals of the forest are smiling, yawning and stretching their furry bodies before bedtime.

All animals... but two : Sam, a big cuddly bear and Gaby, a little scoundrel rabbit.

At night, these two inseparable friends wake up to keep an eye on the sleep of their forest companions and to protect them until the sun rises again.

Sweet and soft, these two very close friends are known in the woods to be the knights of the night!

Tender Sam with his round belly and adorable Gaby with his incredibly soft ears both live on top of a tree. But not just any tree!

A tree so big that it cuts through the clouds;

a tree so impressive that it covers the entire forest; a tree so magical that its branches are made of silver filaments and its leaves of shining stars.

A tree so soft that it reminds us of a kingdom made of cotton

Every night, with the help of their friend the moon, Sam and Gaby take a walk on the branches of this royal tree while listening to the soft purr of the animals quietly dreaming.

Then, they frolic on the longest branch of the tree. The longest and the shiniest! It is the branch that leads both our knights of the night to the heights of the sleeping city.

Once they have arrived, Sam and Gaby take a comfortable seat on the very end of the branch and observe the children asleep in their beds, offering them protection.

Both our knights take this mission very seriously: they make sure that nothing comes to disturb the dreams of all the little girls and boys.

They know how sacred a child's sleep is! To them, it is even more sacred than their own golden crowns. And much softer as well.

In the middle of the night, Sam and Gaby notice in the distance the presence of a bad dream about to disrupt the peaceful sleep of a little boy. The big bear and the scoundrel rabbit take a deep breath and....blow very very strong on the threatening nightmare. So strong that it gets knocked over and disappears just as fast as it came!

And whenever a nightmare refuses to go away, Sam has got the perfect solution: he makes his crown shimmer on it so strong that the scary dream has no other option but to vanish into the sky.

Oh! See who's here? The sunlight, stretching its beams through the roots of the trees. The day is rising. It is time for Sam and Gaby to return where they belong: the top of their tree.

On their way there, hopping from one branch to another, the two little knights lend an ear to the animals and the children who are now waking up and whispering that they had a good sleep.

Happy to hear those morning laughs, Sam and Gaby smile, stretch and fall asleep peacefully in their cotton-like tree.

Night night, little knights...

Good night, little princes.
